“The modern Movie Industry”

These days, cinema and television live side by side.

The movie industry didn't collapse. But cinema audience figures are still low compared to 50 years ago. In Britain, for example, most people only see one or two films per year. In Europe it's three or four and in America six or seven. Because of this, modern movie making has become very different.

For example. Hollywood has more competition from international film-makers now than ever before.

Enormous “picture palaces” with one screen are being replaced by “multi-screen” cinemas.

Modern films have three lives instead of one. First, they appear in the cinema, then on video, and finally they are shown on TV.

There are still large studios but the old “studio system” (with groups of stars working for one company) has disappeared.
